

Environmental Life Cycle Analyst

- ★ 100% - starting date: as soon as possible
- ★ Topic: Food & Agriculture

We are looking for you!

An engaged new team member with skills in life cycle assessment, database and project management that wants to change the world with us. You have a scientific, yet pragmatic working attitude. You enjoy collaborating with clients to deliver the best result within a given time-frame.

Job Description

Your main responsibility will be to assure and improve the quality of our calculation engine and our food LCA database (EDB). This involves collaborating with our IT team that aims to automate data processing and calculations. Further, this involves actively reaching out to scientists and potential data collaborators. Finally, you will also be asked to answer science-related questions to support clients as well as Eaternity marketing & communication. You will also calculate the Eaternity Score for food products.

About Eaternity <http://www.eaternity.org/about/>

Eaternity has the vision to establish climate friendly meals in society. Our experience and strong scientific expertise along with our solid and extensive CO₂-database, forms the backbone of our organization. We are about to expand our work on a larger scale and targeting more people.

We are passionate about changing the world through the intersection of software & LCA and we are looking for exceptional people to join us in that mission. Our approach is to assemble a small, tightly knit collective of extraordinarily talented peers, while pursuing impact and revenue goals typical of larger enterprises. We believe this approach gives individuals greater ownership and input into decisions, and makes for a more efficient and happier workplace.
